

The Heseltine Institute Seminar Series

Place-making for the Common Good

Prof. Rhiannon Corcoran

Wednesday 20th April, 4.30pm

Leslie Hearnshaw theatre, Eleanor Rathbone building

The first Heseltine Institute Seminar will be given by Prof. Rhiannon Corcoran, our Academic Director and lead for Health and Wellbeing.

Rhiannon will talk about how we can use evidence about community well-being and the human response to place to help us make cities better for us in the future.

She will be summarising some of the research conducted by the Communities Evidence Programme of the National What Works for Wellbeing Centre as well as research conducted within the Prosocial Place Programme.

This is an open event and registration is not necessary.

A campus map is attached. The Eleanor Rathbone is building number 106 grid ref D2.

The following seminars will be held this semester:

Date	Presenter	Topic
May	Professor Michael Parkinson	The State of Liverpool City region: Making the most of devolution
June	Dr. Olivier Sykes	Our Merseyside. Our Europe. Our Future